MAJOR GENERAL JOHN N. McLAUGHLIN, USMC
COMMANDING GENERAL, MARINE CORPS RECRUIT DEPOT

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN N. McLAUGHLIN, a veteran of World War II, the Korean Conflict, and action in the Republic of Vietnam, assumed command of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, California, on September 30, 1969.

Following his graduation from Emory University in 1941, he attended Officer Candidate School and was commissioned a second lieutenant. As a captain on Peleliu, he was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry.

Following the outbreak of the Korean Conflict, he was assigned as advisor to the 5th Cavalry Regiment (U.S. Army) and later as Assistant G-3, X Corps Headquarters, in Korea. While serving in this capacity, he was captured by the Chinese communists and remained a prisoner for almost three years. Liberated in September 1953, he was awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct.

In 1959, following assignments as Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., and Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, 5th Marines, he was promoted to colonel.

Later, he was assigned as the Marine Corps Aide to the Under Secretary of the Navy, and then was named Marine Corps Liaison Officer to the Chief of Naval Operations.

In 1965, he graduated from the Nation War College, Washington, D.C., obtained a Master's Degree in International Affairs at George Washington University. Next he became Commanding Officer of the 6th Marines, 2nd Marine Division, and subsequently Chief of Staff of that division.

Promoted to brigadier general in 1967, he was assigned to the United States Strike Command. He earned a Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit for service in this capacity.

He became Assistant Division Commander of the 1st Marine Division in Vietnam in February 1968, then transferred to the staff of the Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, in Saigon, where he served as Director, Combat Operations Center. For his service in Vietnam, the general earned the Distinguished Service Medal and three other decorations.

He was promoted to major general in September 1969, and later designated Commanding General, Marine Recruit Depot, San Diego.

COLONEL WILLIAM G. JOSLYN
COMMANDING OFFICER, RECRUIT TRAINING REGIMENT

COLONEL WILLIAM G. JOSLYN, a veteran of more than 27 years of service in the Marine Corps, enlisted in the Marine Corps in April 1942.

Prior to enlisting in the Marine Corps, he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Stanford University, Stanford, Calif.

Commissioned a Second Lieutenant in April 1944, he served as platoon commander with the Second Marine Division in the South Pacific and accompanied the Division to Japan for occupation duty before returning to the U.S. in 1946.

During the Korean War, he served as a company commander and battalion operations officer with the First Battalion, First Marine Division from 1952-'53. For his gallantry in action while serving as the Commanding Officer of Company "B" he was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V" and the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V".

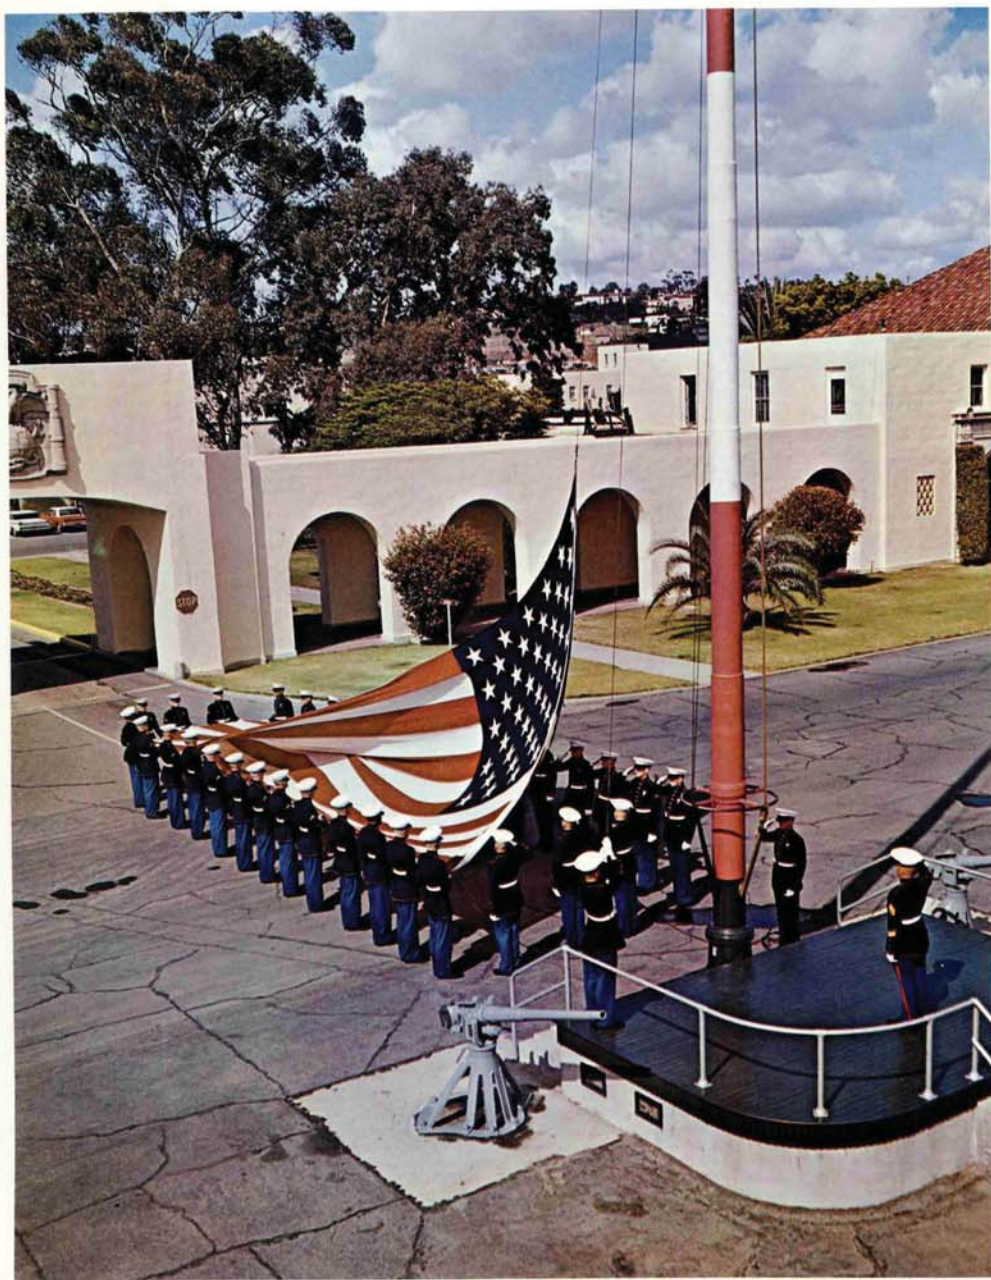

Colonel Joslyn was awarded a gold Star in lieu of a second Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V" for duty in Vietnam. In Vietnam he served as the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, First Marine Aircraft Wing from September 1965 to June 1966.

RECRUIT TRAINING REGIMENT

ALTHOUGH TRAINING MARINE RECRUITS HAS been one of the major functions of this installation almost from its inception, it was not until 1 January 1948 that it was designated Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

First established at Mare Island Navy Yard, San Francisco, in 1913, the Marine Corps' West Coast recruit training facilities moved to San Diego in August 1923.

In March 1957, the Recruit Training Command became a separate command, headed by a general officer. In December 1959, it became the Recruit Training Regiment, a unit of the parent Depot command.

To the thousands of young men who arrive here each year for training, "boot camp" separates the men from the boys, for this is truly where the Marine Corps "builds men."

Regardless of the time of day or night he arrives at Receiving Barracks, the Marine recruit virtually undergoes a transformation within the first 55 minutes he is here. Not only does he begin to take on the appearance of a Marine with a "boot" haircut and his initial issue of clothing, but he begins to think and act like a member of the team.

From early morning to late afternoon he, and the other 75 men of his platoon, are under the constant supervision of a drill instructor who measures every hour for its maximum effectiveness in training. If there is one rule of thumb that can be applied to recruit training, it is that nothing is "routine" to the recruit himself.

The hours are crowded with classes, drills and subjects that were of little concern to him a few short weeks before. He becomes acutely aware of himself as a member of a team with a mission to perform. He becomes keenly conscious of his obligations to his corps, his country, and to himself. In short, his training develops for him a sense of responsibility and pride he might never have known otherwise.

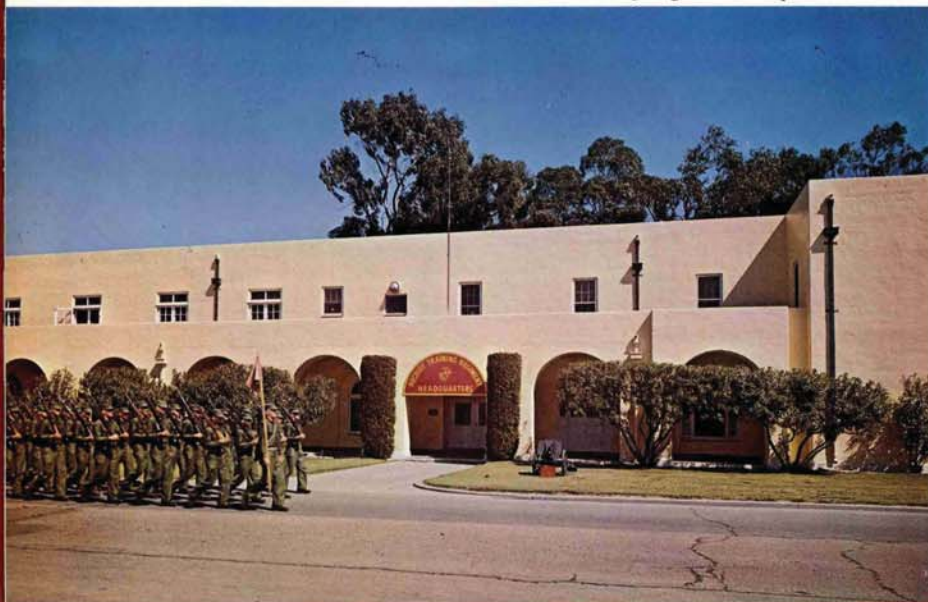

For many, excess pounds seem to disappear while others develop needed dimensions and weight. Mind and body become alert and well coordinated in response to the snap and precision demanded of each individual in hand-to-hand combat, drill or marksmanship training.

Although every Marine is basically a rifleman, constant effort is made to determine each recruit's potential at an early stage in his training. Through a battery of tests, his past experience and education are evaluated and his potential and aptitude measured in an effort to place him in the job or training program best suited to his particular ability.

The personnel of Recruit Training Regiment are specialists in equipping young men with a basic Marine education. The title "Marine" is reserved for only those who can meet the high standards by which a Marine is measured.

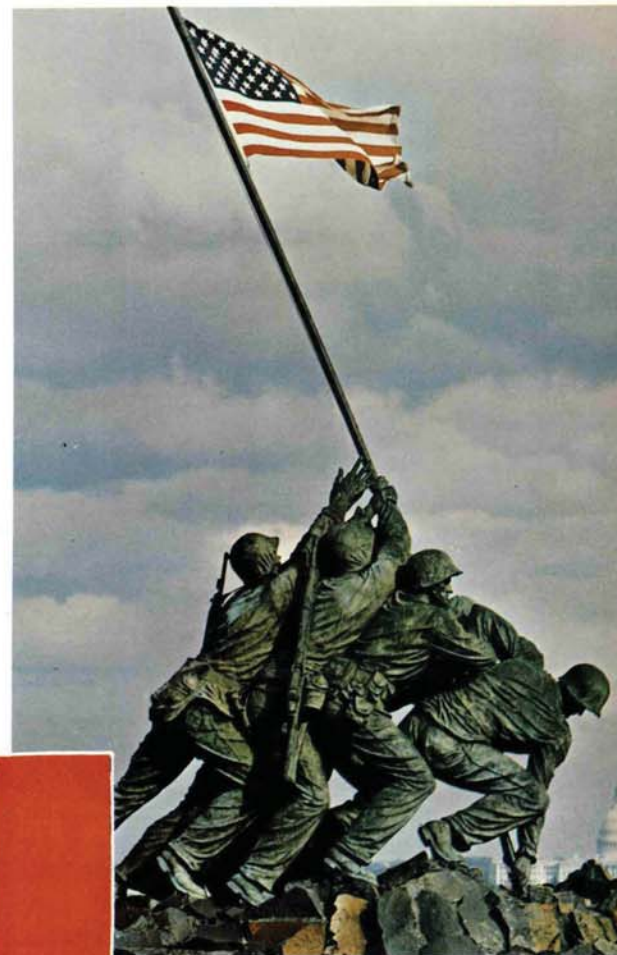

Not until graduation day, that proud moment when a recruit becomes a fullfledged member of the Corps, can he claim the title of "United States Marine."

From Sept. 26 to Oct 4, 1970 there was a major fire known as the "Laguna Fire" in San Diego County, about 40 miles east of MCRD. The fire colored the sky for about a week while we were in boot camp. Small particles of ash constantly rained down for several days.

NEW UTAH MARINE PLATOON

“Welcome aboard!” That was the greeting of Maj. Gen. William T. Fairbourn USMC, Ret. Thursday evening as he faced the newly sworn in 1970 Utah Platoon, a group of Marine enlistees recruited solely from the state of Utah.

The 70 young men, clad uniformly in short-sleeved white shirts and ties – some already sporting Marine-style haircuts – swore to defend their country “again all enemies, foreign and domestic.”

As the shadows lengthened across the south steps of the Utah Capitol Building and the American flag moved gently with the evening breeze, the platoon members were told their enlistment was a sign that they still have faith in the future of America.

Elder Kay A. Schwendiman, regional representative of the Council of the Twelve, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day saints, told the young Marines they were unique.

“In a day when dissent and disorder seems to be the way of life,” Schwendiman said, “you young men have selected a better way of life – the way of the uncommon man.”

Guest speakers in addition to Schwendiman, included Frant M. Prisbrey, deputy secretary of state and Deborah Dunn, Miss Utah for 1970.

The new recruits will go to San Diego for basic training.

Men In 'Utah Platoon,' Start Marine Training

Deseret News Special

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Life during Marine recruit training — a nine-week period of physical and mental instruction designed to mold men into precision-trained members of the U.S. Marine Corps — has begun for 70 young men from Utah.

Named the "Utah Platoon," the recruits arrived at the San Diego depot July 24, after taking an induction oath at the Utah state capitol the previous day.

On their first day, the recruits were informed by a non-commissioned officer of their military rights under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the proper position of attention and what to expect during their orientation period.

Shouts of "Yes, Sir" echoed throughout the initial processing area as the recruits learned the Marine Corps pattern of operation.

Within an hour after receiving their introduction here, the recruits had experienced their first military haircut, received their initial issue of health and comfort items and were changing into their first issue of military clothing.

Packaging, marking and stacking of civilian clothing to be returned home was the next step, as the recruits hurried to fall into platoon formation.

Standing four abreast outside the Receiving Barracks, the men prepared to meet their drill instructors. The three soon arrived to march their new arrivals to the recruit billeting area — the platoon's new home for their training cycle.

Ahead remains long hours of learning the fundamentals of Marine Corps history, military customs and courtesy, physical conditioning, drill, rifle marksmanship and other skills.

Provo Marine Recruiter Gets Performance Award

The U.S. Marine Corps recruiting office in Provo is the recent recipient of a special performance award for the three-state district of Utah, Idaho and Montana.

Gunnery Sergeant J. Tom Allen, who has been in charge of the local office since November, 1968, said that this was the office's first award, but he believes it is only the first of many.

The award is based on a percentage achievement involving the actual number of applications processed and the population of the area. The office enlisted 22 recruits during the second quarter of this year to win the award.

Sergeant Allen praised the high caliber of applicants that come into his office. Many are from BYU, which develops more officer material than any other college in the three-state Marine Corps area.

The Marines offer a two, three, and four year enlistment program which will allow an individual the chance to select his service instead of being drafted and placed as the service decides.

"It's not like I enlisted," said the sergeant who volunteered for the draft in June, 1944. "In those days there was nothing but service-type jobs which didn't allow a man to train for something when he was discharged."

The sergeant, who is a veteran of action in the South Pacific during World War II and of the Vietnamese War, said that today's Marine Corps offers 512 occupational specialties which are compatible with outside jobs.

"In fact, the Commandant of the Corps is pushing for every man to train for a job outside. He instituted a program called 'Project Transition,'" he said.

The project provides all personnel who are assigned to straight service-oriented jobs—such as infantry and gunnery—with some kind of job training for the last six months of their tour duty.

The Provo recruiting office is working to fill a 20-man quota for a new Utah Platoon being formed by the Corps.

Remarkable gasoline breakthrough from the laboratories of Chevron Research Company

BEFORE

"This car was placed in a clear plastic bag with its dirty engine running. The bag started to fill with dirty exhaust until the exhaust completely obscured the car. This shows how exhaust emissions from dirty engines go into the air and waste mileage."

Scott Carpenter Astronaut/Aquonaut personally witnesses this dramatic demonstration.

AFTER F-310

"The same car—after running on just six tankfuls of Chevron with Formula F-310. Dirty exhaust emissions reduced sharply. The bag remains clear! No dirty smoke. Chevron with F-310 turns dirty smoke into good clean mileage."

New F-310 in Chevron gasolines turns dirty exhaust into good clean mileage.

Now, scientists at Chevron Research Company have achieved the most long-awaited gasoline development in history! It's a new gasoline additive—Formula F-310®—that sharply reduces dirty exhaust from dirty engines. And helps toward cleaner air.

Tests conducted by Scott Research Laboratories, an independent research group, showed that Chevron gasolines with F-310 reduced unburned hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide exhaust emissions dramatically. Clearly, this is a major step towards solving one of today's most urgent problems.

F-310 also improves mileage, because dirty exhaust is really wasted gasoline. So F-310 literally keeps good mileage from going up in smoke.

How does an engine produce dirty exhaust in the first place? As a car accumulates mileage, deposits build up. The amounts of gasoline and air fed into the engine get out of balance. This causes the engine to "run rich," wasting gasoline. As a result, excessive unburned hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide exhaust emissions go into the air. F-310 can correct this condition. Just six tankfuls can do the job.

Formula F-310, a patented gasoline additive, is now available in Chevron gasolines wherever you see the F-310 sign.

Plain City Decides To Enforce Curfew

PLAIN CITY—This community's young people celebrate Halloween twice each year with pranks and vandalism occurring on two separate holidays, according to city officials.

Mayor Keith P. Blanch said, "We've always had a tolerant attitude. I think we should keep a tolerant attitude, but we've got some things that have gotten out of hand a bit."

According to Councilman Ron Chubb, "We're the laughing stock of Weber County."

Apparently Plain City has been a gathering point for young people on the eve of the Fourth of July and Halloween.

RAISE RUCKUS

The youths come from other parts of the county and "raise a ruckus," running from law enforcement officials, starting fires in fields and generally raising a disturbance in the community, officials report.

Councilman Lynn Folkman said he had talked to some of the troublemakers and been told, "If the cops didn't come we'd go home because there'd be nothing to do."

He indicated the young people cause the trouble out of boredom and to raise the emotions of the older residents of the community.

"Keep the law out of town and the grow-up home," he said, stating he believed it would be the solution to the problem.

Mr. Chubb agreed with Mr. Folkman in part when he said, "We have to have an official committee or keep

City Clarifies Manner To Obtain Police Help

WASHINGTON TERRACE — A phone number for the Washington Terrace Police Department, listed in the phone book after the words, "emergency only," gives residents an erroneous conception.

Councilman Homer Rich and Police Chief Henry G. Schaefer said this "emergency" number, 225-9023, is the Utah Highway Patrol dispatcher who answers calls for Washington Terrace when the city office is closed.

It is not an emergency number, but the only number where the police officers on duty can be contacted during weekends and on week days between 5 a.m. and 5 p.m., they said.

PAYS PATROL

The city pays the highway patrol for this service, and residents are advised that they may call this number at any time when they need an officer, even during daytime hours, they said.

On weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., an officer may at times be in the police station at the city hall, and by calling 225-9023 a person may talk to this officer or leave a message where he may contact the caller, if it is general business.

If it is an emergency, the city hall personnel who answer the telephone are able to contact the officer in his car if he is not in the office.

They pointed out that during weekdays, in other words, a person may call either the city hall or the highway patrol dispatcher, but evenings or weekends, they should call the highway patrol number because no one is working in the city hall.

Chief Schaefer said he is preparing some pamphlets to be sent out to all residents advising them that calls may be placed to the highway patrol number for any police business at any time.

State Water Resources Board Outlines Needs In Meeting at Nephi

By SADDIE GREENHALGH

NEPHI — The State Board of Water Resources sponsored a meeting last week to give a report on the state water plan to date. R. E. Egan, second vice chairman, conducted the meeting.

The Utah Water and Power Board was created in 1947 by the state legislature and instructed to prepare comprehensive plans for the full development of all of Utah's water resources. The legislature has not defined a state water plan nor set forth specific goals and policies. In 1963, the legislature appropriated funds for the preparation of a state water plan.

Suggestions

The purpose of the interim report on Wednesday was to get suggestions and plans to bring up to the legislature when it meets. More detailed studies need to be carried out by the state in cooperation with federal agencies and private interests. Clyde E. Conover, director, chairman of the Utah Water Board, stated: "Water is the economy of our state." He pointed out that three years have gone into the planning of the water program.

Engineer James G. Christensen, director of planning, said that the board has presented four alternatives, which were:

- 1—Emphasize bringing as much water as possible from the Colorado River to the Wasatch Front. This river is the major water supply.
- 2—to bring as much water as possible from Bear River to Salt Lake and Utah Counties.
- 3—Desalting water of the Bear, Weber, and Jordan rivers just before they enter Great Salt Lake.
- 4—A combination of the foregoing three. Each alternative consumes the Central Utah Water complex.

Program Now

Scheduled and under construction in the present program, $1,000 acre foot water per year could be brought into

Juab County in 10 years and after that possibly 30,000 acre feet depending on which alternative is chosen.

According to Lynn Ludlow, Central Utah Conservancy District Manager, it was estimated within 10 years the population of the state would be 14 million people with 80 percent located on the Wasatch Front. There is now 6 million acre feet of water in the state and it is hoped that by 2020, 8 million acre feet could be made available.

However, there is always a price tag. Estimated cost would be $2 billion plus to build all the works in full realization of water by private enterprise and state funds.

Goals Set

Goals established by the board were discussed by Daniel F. Lawrence, board director, from Salt Lake City. He pointed out the foremost were:

- 1—to provide for the highest economic use of water.
- 2—Encourage municipal and industrial growth.
- 3—Stabilize existing rural areas.
- 4—Enhance recreation.

Juab County has 13,444 acres of irrigated land but there are many more acres that could be cultivated if the water supply was greater. Sixty thousand acres of new land could be opened up.

It was stated that Utah is in a tie with Nevada for being the driest state.

In the past 10 years, 15 counties have lost population and 14 increased. Juab County had a net loss of 3 percent.

The high school's A Cappella choir directed by Karl Barton will sing as a part of the opening assembly. Of special interest to parents this year will be an explanation of modular scheduling.

NEPHI — When George Ray Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Jackson, and Mark Eugene Wilkey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. Wilkey, were born Aug. 31, 1951, no one knew just how close these two boys would be during the next 19 years.

They were not blessed or baptized the same day but they have lived in the same Nephi 3rd Ward of the LDS Church and been the best of friends. They became Deacons, Teachers and Priests the same day as they both reached the age to be ordained to these different offices.

A number of family groups have found a happy answer for "what to do until the hunters return." The women folk who remain home with the children find pleasure in gathering together. One such group activity was held at the home of Mrs. Alvin Larsen in Springville when her mother, Mrs. Iona Marshall, Provo, and her sister and family, Mrs. Tom Walter from Kearns spent four days together, baking cookies and candy and enjoying pleasant sociability.

Mrs. John W. Moe of Orem has returned home after spending a month visiting her mother, Mrs. Reta Andolice and her two sisters, Mrs. George Gilden, both of Lufkin, Tex., and Mrs. Geneva Lieb of West Columbia and her brother, Earl Snowden of Innesville Tex.

Economic Protests
Lined Up

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A group of youthful protesters say they plan to put on a series of "dramatizations" Saturday night when President Nixon comes to Salt Lake City, to show the President they don't like his economic policies.

The "dramatizations" will include simulated soup lines, people standing on corners selling apples and pencils and other people shining shoes, according to Steve Holbrook, Salt Lake City.

Holbrook described himself as a spokesman ("we don't have officers") for We the People, a coalition of students, young people and workers who seek solutions to common problems.

PEOPLE INVITED

Saturday at 5 p.m. Holbrook said, "We are inviting the people to come to a meeting to discuss alternatives to the Richard Nixon economic policy, or rather how to survive Mr. Nixon's economic policy." The session will be at Carpenter's Hall, 120 W. 11th South in Salt Lake City.

That's just before the President is scheduled to arrive in Utah for a campaign visit on behalf of Rep. Laurence Burton. Holbrook said his group didn't plan to announce the times and places of the "dramatizations" beforehand so there would be no interference.

He did say his group had no plans to attend the Nixon rally or harass the President. "We plan nothing remotely like that," he said.

Holbrook said the economy is a problem that concerns both students and workers. "When they start laying off full-time people from jobs because of the economy," he said, "that makes it all the more difficult for students and part-time workers to get jobs. Everyone is hurt in the process," he said.
